

Lingdale is one of the best courses Leicestershire has to offer. The facilities are great from the new clubhouse and well stocked pro shop right through to the excellent practice areas on offer. The course itself though is the real gem, it says on the website that Tony Jacklin described the opening three holes as probably the toughest opening in the midlands. I would have to agree with that but don't let that put you off, they are tough but fair and a real good challenge of your golfing ability but then the whole course is like that. The shape and layout of the course is superb, the greens and fairway are in real good condition and the day we played the course it looked lush and green. The course is open to visitors and societies and the rates are very reasonable for a course of this standard, I would definitely recommend this course to anyone who enjoys the game of golf. If you have never played this course before then pick the phone up and book yourself a tee, you will not regret it.
